

“In full transparency, we previously made the facts widely known concerning Rusal’s direct minority investment in the greenfield Braidy Atlas aluminum rolling mill, including on our website. This investment and the supply contract allow Braidy Atlas to create the most sustainable aluminum production in the world for the automotive and food and beverage industries, creating 600 permanent jobs, $2.8 billion of economic impact for the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and over $390 million of combined economic uplift for the neighboring states of Ohio and West Virginia. Our CEO Craig Bouchard spoke before the United Nations Global Climate Action Summit in New York last week. Braidy Atlas has taken a leadership role in the international coalition to bring the aluminum industry to zero net carbon emissions by 2050. The health and prosperity of our community are of a higher priority than political partisanship. We look forward to providing Senator Wyden with a timely response to his inquiry and interest in our example of leadership in the economic revitalization of Appalachia.”
